Why Change Your Filters?

- Unhealthy air. Dust and debris from a dirty filter can recirculate back into your home. This can cause health issues for those with allergies, asthma and other respiratory conditions.
- Restricts Air Flow This can cause additional strain on the air handler fan motor. This strain can burn out the motor
- A clogged or dirty air filter can cause a fire.
- Higher maintenance costs. Dust and dirt can bypass a clogged filter and land on system components. This not only reduces system performance, but can increase maintenance costs as well. It costs far more to pay a qualified professional to clean your system than it does to change a filter.
- Reduced comfort. Fans push air through the filter. If the filter becomes too clogged, the blower has to strain harder to move the air. With the reduced airflow, you may experience hot or cold spots in your home.

Keep the Air Moving!

It's a big return for a small investment. Changing your filter once a month only takes a few minutes. That doesn't seem like much when you consider the benefits—energy savings, less maintenance and a healthier, more comfortable indoor environment.
